To Whom It May Concern:

Greenville University's School of Education and Advancement Courses, Inc. have partnered together to offer courses for teachers at the graduate level for their continuing education needs.

Greenville University does not require any Advancement Courses for their degree programs. However, learners may transfer in six Advancement Courses credits to fulfill the elective credit requirement for Greenville University's Master of Arts in Education (MAE) program. Advancement Courses are posted on an official transcript as graduate level credit.

Greenville University's Graduate Academic Catalog, available at <http://www.greenville.edu/academics/academic-catalog/>, lists the courses offered to students wanting to take advantage of this partnership.

Greenville University has been accredited since 1947 by the Higher Learning Commission of the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools as an institution granting the bachelor's degree, and since 1996 granting the master's degree. Since 1974, the education program has been accredited by the Illinois State Board of Education, which participates in an interstate licensure agreement with 37 other states and the District of Columbia. In 2014, Greenville University received accreditation under the Council for the Accreditation of Educator Preparation (CAEP) standards.

Greenville University is also a member of the National Council for State Authorization Reciprocity Agreements (NC-SARA) which allows Greenville to offer online courses to residents of other states who are also members of NC-SARA.

Questions about how Advancement Courses are accepted at Greenville University should be directed to the Records Office at records@greenville.edu or at 618-664-7025.
